To Whom It May Concern

I very confidently recommend Glen Morrison as an investigator. He was chosen by our lawyer, Howard Rubin, as the best investigator and the only person he would want to have work with him in dealing with the RCMP shooting of my son Ian Bush in October, 2005.

Glen was able to come to Houston almost immediately to interview witnesses. The people he interviewed have since told us that they felt he was to be trusted, was professional and would perhaps give them their only opportunity to tell their story. He was able to obtain detailed videotaped interviews which have since proved to be useful to our case. It is important that such interviews be conducted as quickly as possible to provide a permanent record since court dates may be long in the future. He produced a detailed chronological binder for our lawyer, which was very useful in the inquest.

From the investigation he did in Houston and from limited information provided by the RCMP Glen developed a theory on the events leading up to and including Ian's death. This gave us the strength to continue our "defense" of Ian. We have come to trust his intuition and assessment. At the inquest it became apparent that his theory differed greatly from that of the RCMP and was likely more plausible than the conclusions drawn by the investigating officers.

Glen also did some research into excessive force which he provided to Howard Rubin and our family. This helped us know what to expect from the police investigation and the inquest. It provided us information we needed when talking with the media about what had happened to Ian.

He has always made himself available when someone has something which may be important to the case. We take details we learn and ideas people give us to Glen for him to process and file if the information will be useful. He has always shown us a great deal of patience.

Yours truly
